

Trustee Responsibilities and Person Specification

London's writer development agency Spread the Word is looking for three new Trustees.

Spread the Word is here to help London's writers make their mark – on the page, the screen and in the world. We do this by kick starting the careers of London's best new writers, and energetically campaigning to ensure that publishing truly reflects the diversity of the city. We support the creative and professional development of writing talent, by engaging those already interested in literature and those who will be, and by advocating on behalf of both.

We're specifically looking for Trustees with skills in legal, financial and HR – but of equal importance is finding people who share our ambition to support writers from diverse and underprivileged backgrounds to ensure that Londoners get to read, hear and see stories that are truly reflective of our capital city.

If you think you would enjoy the challenge of helping us deliver this work and share our commitment to writers and writing, then we want to hear from you.
